YELLOW JACK ON THE MARCH.

She Had Three Captains on the Trip to and from Santos.

The British steamer Martha from the fever-infected port of Santos, Brazil, is detained at quarantine for fumigation. The steamer broke out among the crew and the captain, chief engineer, second engineer and a fireman fell victims to it.

On Dec. 24, 1891, a steamer, which was reported to be the Martha, was seen in the harbor of Santos. The vessel had three different commanders during the voyage. Capt. Gordon, who had sailed from Santos, was replaced by Capt. Metcalf, and then by Capt. Metcalf, who died of the fever after an illness of three days. He was buried at Santos.

On Dec. 9 Capt. Metcalf, aged forty-five, a native of Shields, England, died of the fever after an illness of three days. He was buried at Santos.

On Dec. 16 Second Engineer John Anderson was taken down with the fever and died the same day. He was buried at Santos.

Capt. Andrews, who had taken the fever soon after assuming command on Dec. 17, and second Mate Gordon became the Captain.

The Martha reached Victoria a few days later with her crew in the ship's hospital. She remained in that port until Dec. 20.

No new cases of fever have occurred since the Martha left Victoria, and the members of the crew were all apparently in good health when the steamer reached this port last night.
